Rewarding Academic Excellence

2010-2011 Scholarships

The UW Stroum Jewish Studies Program is currently inviting applications for scholarships for the 2010-2011 academic year. The four (4) merit-based scholarship opportunities in Jewish Studies ($3,000 each) are intended to encourage and recognize outstanding undergraduate and graduate students who include coursework or research in Jewish studies at the University of Washington as a significant part of their academic program. To be eligible, applicants must be currently enrolled at the University of Washington and are expected to pursue such work during the 2010-2011 academic year. Students do NOT need to be Jewish Studies majors or minors to apply. Scholarship award recipients are asked to submit a brief report at the end of the academic year to the Jewish Studies Program and are strongly encouraged to attend the annual Awards and Recognition Reception in the spring.

Applications consist of the following:

- A cover sheet with name, student number, phone number, postal and e-mail addresses
- A 1-2 page statement of the student's academic plans.
- An official transcript—sent directly from the registrar's office.
- Two letters of recommendation from UW faculty.

Candidates may be invited for a brief interview with the scholarship committee. Award decisions will be made by early May.
